MORE EGGS ARE BEING HANDED IN SOUTH AREA

CALGARY, April 3.—Eggs handled by the Southern Egg Producers' Association in 1938, were 328 per cent more than in 1937. It was reported at the second annual meeting here yesterday.

Last year 1,000,000 eggs were handled by the cooperative marketing organization. The first three months of 1939 show an increase in volume of 83 per cent over the same period of 1938. Already the 1939 business has exceeded that of the whole year of 1937, the first year of operation.

All of the million-dollar eggs were sold to Calgary retailers direct.

Harry Hays, Calgary, was returned as president of the association. Directors elected were: A. Henderson, Red Deer; Mrs. John B. Ingham, Lethbridge; Mrs. Ruth Beckner, Millarville; Mrs. C. H. Cameron, Calgary; Edward Hill, Calgary; and J. B. Swallow, D. B. Belva, Shepard, and G. B. Cameron, Calgary.

Edward Hill, Calgary, was reappointed secretary-treasurer.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA KIDNAPPED, NOT CAPTURED: BENES

CLEVELAND, April 3.—Dr. Edvard Benes and Mayor La Guardia of New York met Sunday before a Cleveland audience of nearly 9,000 persons, described the European situation as far more critical than it was in 1934 but expressed belief in re-establishment of Czechoslovakia was certain.

"The victory will come," said Dr. Benes, second president of the nation taken under protection by the United States. "It will be the victory of a free Europe."

"Czechoslovakia has not been captured," declared Benes, who said the republic has not been destroyed. Czechoslovakia has been kidnapped. When the kidnapper talks about protectorates he takes the language of the kidnapper who protects the child until the ransom is paid, or murders the child.

SASKATCHEWAN LEGISLATURE ENDS: 103 BILLS

REGINA, April 3.—The longest session the Saskatchewan legislature ever held was proposed Saturday night—33rd sitting day of the session that opened Jan. 19.

Legislative Assembly, P. McNab gave assent to 103 bills, four of them private bills.

The Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation opposition fought as long as possible against legislation requiring farmers to get certificates before they sell any of their 1939 grain crop.

The certificates, from municipal councils, show the farmer has paid his 1939 taxes and seen advance.

LONDON TIMES CONGRATULATES ON TCA SERVICE

LONDON, April 3.—The Times editorially congratulated the Canadian government today on the occasion of inauguration of the Trans-Canada passenger air service. No where else in the British Empire have there emergency landing grounds at intervals as short as 35 miles on a route as long as that in Canada, the newspaper pointed out.

When there is regular British air service across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, the Times added, the quickest way from England to New Zealand will probably be by way of Canada, and "it is Canada that our empire will have to thank for that important service" across the domain.

Two Reports Of Sabotage Aboard Steamers Probed

BELFAST, April 3.—Police today investigated reports of sabotage aboard two British-owned ships, at least one of which caught fire in the Irish sea.

The vessels were the cargo steamship Silve Bear and the passenger ship Duke of Devon, both out of Hingham for Belfast and both owned by the Canadian Pacific and British Railways company.

United Farmers Ask Protection In Market Act

CALGARY, April 3.—A United Farmers of Alberta executive memorandum was sent last night to Hon. E. C. Manning, provincial secretary, outlining U.F.A. recommendations which the farm organization hopes to see embodied in the Alberta Marketing of Products Act now before the Alberta legislature.

Main recommendation is for provision of a pool for the equalization of returns under the marketing scheme.

The U.F.A. executive expressed the opinion that without this provision the act is useless so far as farmers are concerned.

WINNIPEG, April 3.—Dr. Philip H. Kraus, of Chicago, associate professor of surgery in Northwestern University Medical school, Thursday frowned on high heels that women wear when he appeared as a delegate to the American College of Surgeons' annual convention.

He warned fellow members of the college these high heels cause curvature of the spine.

"If our children must wear high heels, let them wear them to the theatre and to parties but outside of that get rid of them and use a sensible shoe," said the doctor, a specialist of bone diseases.

High heels give women a way-back which caused prominent abdomens and eventually backache, he added. He added criticism for flappers who "thought it smart to stomp with their slippers pushed out."

A Long Range Adjustment

It is estimated that 30,000,000 acres of western land are now devoted to the production of export commodities, chiefly wheat. If it were possible, which is sometimes suggested but is not possible, to use the bulk of this land for mixed farming, the home market would be glutted, prices cut to unprofitable levels for all classes of produce, and eastern farmers would confront a situation much like that of the western wheat-grower at present.

The readjustment of western farming to a basis on which wheat-production for export will be less vital will have to be undertaken gradually, intelligently directed. Not all of the 30,000,000 acres will have to be turned into farms or could be. Much of it never should have been plowed up and will have to be turned back into pasture. Perhaps half the amount is best adapted for that use, and cannot, except in certain seasons be profitably used for any other purpose.

Efficiency First

In his estimates for this year, Chief Shute requested to allocate $9,344 with which to buy two cars for the police department equipped with two-way radio, but the commissioners dropped this item in revising the estimates for presentation to council. In Calgary the police commissioners have recommended that council provide the police department with four radio-equipped cars, two of them new.

It is symptomatic of the size of the two cities, and the difficulty of policing them, that radio-equipped cars are being asked for, year after year. It may be supposed these requests will be repeated every year until the equipment is supplied.

It is doubtful if in cities of comparable size in Canada there are many which do not provide their police forces with power cars thus equipped with apparatus for keeping constantly in touch with headquarters. There are few of where corresponding population which are so widespread, a circumstance which makes it advisable to utilize the police forces to the best possible advantage. Certainly there are none where burglaries have been more numerous in the past year, or where traffic regulation is more necessary.

It is better to be ahead of time, rather than behind time, in providing equipment which would increase police efficiency. The Edmonton council will be making a mistake if the four cars are not ordered, at the expense of giving law-breakers an advantage over the police.

Canada's Position

Like his outline a week before of the European situation, the statement of Prime Minister King on Thursday as to Canada's external responsibilities was free from heroics, posing and dogmatism. It was a studied presentation of the position of this Dominion as a self-governing country in relation to world affairs; a country free to choose its own course, but owing and owing obligations to the other Empire countries, and vitally concerned in the preservation of peace, order and national rights and liberties.

There was no announcement of a cut-and-dried foreign policy, other than support for Great Britain and other countries in the effort to avert war and check aggression. There were no commitments to military or economic action, for the reasons given by Mr. Chamberlain for the keeping clear of advance commitments in the fast changing international scene; and the added reason that parliament, not the Government, is the body which must make such decisions.

It was significant that the Opposition leader gave immediate support to this presentation all along the line. The statement thus carries the endorsement of both major parties, and must be accepted as reflecting the attitude of the Government, at a time of international tension, in as it should be, and credit is coming to Dr. Manion for having the courage to take a course that may not be approved in some quarters from which his party has always drawn strong support.

This statement of Canada's position will not satisfy the extremists. It will seem too indefinite to those who would give Mr. Chamberlain a blank cheque; and it will incur the displeasure of those who talk neutrality in terms which suggest a desire to have the Dominion break away from the Empire and adopt the role of a hermit. There is strong reason in this, as in the statement itself, to suppose that it expresses the views of the overwhelming mass of Canadians, who are neither sycophants nor separatists.

2,000 "Missing" Ships

Canadian readers, to whom a national shortage of food is almost inconceivable, will find it hard to sense the fact, stated in the House of Commons, that ships carrying food to Great Britain are now 2,000 fewer than they were in 1914.

To inland dwellers, 2,000 ocean vessels would seem enough to carry all the food-stuffs that have to be moved anywhere in the seven seas. But this slump in carriers is so serious a war risk that a new bonus scheme has been framed to encourage the building of more ships, to pay subsidies for the operation of ocean "tramps", and to make cheap loans to ship-building firms; while for temporary security against food shortage it is proposed to spend $10,000,000 to buy ships otherwise destined for scrapping and hold these for emergency use.

The evil reactions from economic nationalistic policies are not confined to bankrupting producers whose distant markets are closed against them. The carriers on which we suffer also, witness the financial difficulties of Canada's two transcontinental railways, and the disaster sketched above that has overtaken ocean shipping. With millions more to be fed than a quarter of a century ago, the transporters of food are doing less business; apparently in the case of British shipping companies cannot keep going without subsidies from the national treasury.

Britain's policy of bonusing home production of food has hit the shipping interests as it has hit the Canadian wheat grower. Having paid bonuses which drove the food-ships from the sea, the British taxpayer is now to pay more bonuses for the building of new ones.

Editorial Notes

The Calgary commissioners have recommended to council a tax rate of 47 1/2 mills. There is a mark for the Edmonton council to aim at.

One of the South African Ministers says that from his point of view the press has become a great menace in the world today. It is to politicians who have caught the Fascist itch.

Congratulations to the Vegreville Observer on having completed thirty-three years of splendid service to its community and the province, all of that long period under its present publisher and editor. Editorially the Observer is still "going strong" as ever; but it expresses a hope that in some respects 1939 will be a "better year than some of those immediately preceding that is from 1930 on through 1938." May the hope be generously fulfilled.

Current Comment

Uniforms and Complexes

Detectors provide an element of comedy, made the more ludicrous by the efforts to impress people. A news reel at the theatre showed Prime Minister Chamberlain being escorted by British Mounted Police in the former's visit to Rome. Mr. Chamberlain was attired in the quiet, yet dignified style of an English gentleman: double-breasted frock coat, soft hat, and carrying an umbrella. He had a pleasant smile. Mounted with his ever-present sword, protruding lower jaw, clothed in military uniform and with sword swinging at his side, presented a striking contrast. It seems that some (and they are not confined to dictators alone) fancy a uniform gives them a superior air. Often it comes maybe an inferiority complex. What is lacking in personality, some evidently try to make up for in impressing others with uniforms and trappings. —Columbus Jones.

Can Canada Be Neutral?

Two Canadian politicians, Mr. George Heen, a French-speaking Conservative, and Mr. Lacroix, a French-Canadian Liberal, have recently visited in an extreme form the intense desire for peace which unites every democratic country in the world today. Canada, says the first, should fight only in a war that directly threatens her territory, while Mr. Lacroix suggests that, in order to avoid complications in European affairs, Canada should declare herself an independent and neutral nation.

Under the free constitution of the Commonwealth, no British Dominion can be involved in a war save by its own deliberate decision. Neither Canada, Australia, New Zealand, or South Africa is bound by any obligation, other than that of sentiment and self-interest, to take any step whatever in the defence of Britain. Canada, Australia and New Zealand, keeping one eye on Japan, and South Africa, uneasy about German colonial policy, have obvious reasons for urging the British to the contrary.

But what would that security be worth, if democratic forces were defeated in France and Britain were to have to move before the German, Italian, Japanese, and Russian hordes? Already the United States is deeply concerned about ideological and trade threats to the Monroe doctrine. In such circumstances the isolationist policy, understanding with Japan, and their own zeal for expansion, in a world in which North America might be the last refuge of democracy, are factors of profound significance for both the United States and Canada.—Christian Science Monitor.

Cries of "Fufu!"

Her Hitler entered Prague in modest and unobtrusive fashion. This is somewhat unusual for Her Hitler, who usually moves before large crowds and with considerable pomp and circumstance. The reason for his comparatively modest entry into Prague was his desire to clear on reading details of the earlier entry of German troops.

This is the first time that Her Hitler's legions have moved into territory peopled by non-Germans. The contrast is striking. The reception was by far the quietest the German troops have received since Her Hitler's first arrival in Prague about 1933. The Czechs may be deceived and kicked about, but they retain considerable spirit and will not be so easily won over by the soldiers of Germany.

Jeans replaced chaps and unadorned work clothes took the place of uniforms. The people of Prague showed little interest in the unwelcome visitors and booed them roundly. Police restrained them from springing at the German entrance, but the Czechs may be deceived and kicked about, but they retain considerable spirit and will not be so easily won over by the soldiers of Germany.

Cries of "Fufu!—Go back home!" were heard, says the news agency, as the German troops moved on. Such preliminaries would hardly set the stage for a typical Hitler arrival. Her Hitler prefers to make an entry to the city with a hard time clearing. The roar of the crowd, the boom of guns, and the flourish of trumpets in his entrance make. Prague would have offered something else.

Small wonder that Her Hitler decided to slip quietly into the city without any attempt at the theatrical—Hitleresque.

Mr. Chamberlain Says No

From the purely male viewpoint, three hearty British cheers are due Prime Minister Chamberlain for standing up boldly in the House of Commons and refusing to sponsor a measure that would compel wage earners to disclose the value of their wages to trade union officials.

It may be reactionary and even unliberal in principle to hold that the male of the species is entitled to keep the secret of his earnings to himself. But many will still hold to that view. It reveals a practical strength in Mr. Chamberlain that he must not be taken in by the fact that for some years now Canada has followed the practice of having bachelors for her prime ministers. This may be carrying aloofness and male dignity a trifle too far.

But on the other hand, Britain has a few prime ministers who have been almost notorious for the dominant quality of their wives. With all respect, of course it is difficult to imagine Lord Baldwin, for instance, holding out on his pay cheque, or his highness, the Duke of Devonshire, to be so easily won over by the value of their wages to trade union officials.

One might remember, quite without reproach, that it was during the German invasion of Poland that Mrs. Chamberlain was permitted to remain herself. Thus, there seems to be some remote connection between a man wearing the pants in his own home and the firmness of his attitude in his public or business life.

If one wished to be modern and social-minded, one might get quite indignant with Mr. Chamberlain for offering encouragement to those persons who refuse to look over to the little woman on any day.

Strangely enough, his attitude in this matter gives us greater confidence in him as a statesman. There is something as comforting as his own decision in this matter as there is his old umbrella.—Vancouver Sun.

"The United States has entered every one of its six major conflicts utterly unprepared, both on land and sea."—Admiral Clegg H. Woodward.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWEN

Premier Pattullo of British Columbia is doubly convinced now of the wisdom of the requirement of his government that all auto drivers pass a written and driving test. He was inspecting the new Vancouver testing station a few days ago, where they have numerous machines and robots, whereas the old system was a farce.

COLDEN PASS driver is tested for eight, HIS OWN TEST color-blindness, judge of distance, and speed of moving objects. He was persuaded to try the tests himself. His eyesight registered 100 per cent. Then they tested his reaction to an emergency situation. At the change of a light the subject must take his foot from the accelerator and apply the foot brake. To the dismay of the officials and the enlightenment of the premier, when the flash came he couldn't find the footbrake.

"Glad it wasn't an accident or I couldn't have stopped," he admitted.

In a dummy driver's seat with several people watching, a driver may not be as capable as in his own car, but the principle of requiring drivers to pass a test is a right one. There'd be fewer collisions and malfunctions if every driver had to prove his fitness to drive on the public thoroughfares a machine that in a couple of hours could be transformed into an instrument of death.

Salmon canners in the State of Washington feel that certain of their rivals on the Canadian side, who have been putting some over on them—and their feeling is well founded. In order to restore the Fraser river sockeye fishery which suffered when the business of the C.N.R. grade through the Fraser river canyon dumped thousands of tons of rock into the canyon mouth and prevented the fish from getting up to the spawning grounds, an International Salmon Commission was formed.

Closing of the salmon traps, which take tremendous toll of the fish, until the Fraser fisheries are fully restored, was decided upon. The Washington legislature passed the law, but the result in the closing of 219 fish traps. But no legislation has been passed in Canada to implement the agreement. The Canadian government, through the Fisheries Department, has refused to open the traps, and the result is that the Canadian government is taking a loss of $1,000,000 in the fish trade. The Canadian government has taken power to re-open the Washington traps.

A letter from British Columbia instead of from Quebec, anxious to see the Fraser fisheries restored to their old wealth, would probably have decided otherwise.

I've been supplied with some figures about the gasoline business in western Canada by Mr. C. D. Melbacher, district manager of the Texas Company in Calgary. He says that in 1938 it was that it is that refined gasoline costing 8.15 cents per imperial gallon at Los Angeles still brings a loss of 1.10 cents per gallon when it is sold in the Canadian market.

LIGHT UPON GAS PROFITS when wholesaled at 22 cents a gallon. I confess it takes me a long time to get a grip on the figures. I've been supplied with some figures about the gasoline business in western Canada by Mr. C. D. Melbacher, district manager of the Texas Company in Calgary. He says that in 1938 it was that it is that refined gasoline costing 8.15 cents per imperial gallon at Los Angeles still brings a loss of 1.10 cents per gallon when it is sold in the Canadian market.

The tale of mounting prices runs like this: gas bought at Los Angeles for 10.15 cents per imperial gallon is landed at Seattle for 7.18 cents. The parent company sells to the Canadian company at 10.15 cents an imperial gallon (being 1.10 cents less than the U.S. price) and the conclusion that the 3.618 cents spread between the buying and selling prices at Seattle is all pure profit. The Dominion government receives nine cents per U.S. gallon to be paid, or it imposes a duty to make a profit of 1.10 cents per gallon. In addition to the transportation cost to Canada, the Dominion government imposes 2.28 cents per gallon in tariff and 1.10 cents per gallon, and the provincial government seven cents a gallon road tax. After allowing the distributor company 4 cents a gallon to cover distribution, insurance, trade discounts, corporation etc., the Canadian company is left to the extent of 3.618 cents a gallon—exactly the amount of the spread in Seattle by the parent company. I wonder do you see any significance in that?

To the obvious question as to what the distributive company—presumably a subsidiary of the Canadian company—makes out of distribution, Mr. Melbacher says on last year's business a virtual 100 per cent levy on the Canadian company. Seemingly the chain of profits and losses narrows down to whether profit there is in selling refined gasoline for 6.15 cents a gallon in Los Angeles, plus less than half a cent profit on distribution.

I admit it has me stumped.

Religion Day By Day

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

THE PASS PORTS THE PRESENT A chance name mentioned last evening by the gods served as "Open Sesame" before the treasure door of the "Arabian Nights." For it recalled a fierce battle with a famous Georgian knight in which he had been engaged twenty years ago, in behalf of our Christian civilization.

Details of the fight came thronging back by the mind, and gave me real spiritual refreshment. Am I busy and overworked today? No, my friend, my arm in the long ago is still able to make me a good warrior for God. The past is proof of power for the present, and who hath led will lead. In hours of gloom our hearts refreshment is, "O God, our help in ages past."

As Israel's prophets were continually reminding the people of God's care of them in Egypt and in the wilderness, so we should be continually reminding the people of God's care of them in the past, that we may be able to stand firm in the present.

Hisberts both helped us. O God, and we raise an Ebenezer to them that God still will our suffering friends. Amen.

Editor, Bulletin: The following is an open letter to the minister of Municipal Affairs, Edmonton, Alberta, which I would ask you to publish:

I received your letter of the 13th in which you informed me that you forbade the annual divisional election here, and appointed an administrator for the City of Edmonton. I realize that you did not have the protest of the majority of the ratepayers, but acted on the complaints of a few men. You stripped us farmers of the little democracy we did possess by appointing the dictatorship of a single man.

His letter in Central Europe was very similar to yours. I could never believe that under the administration of a single man, the democratic principle would be taken to suppress mass democracy.

One hundred years ago today (April 3, 1839) a large procession left London for Upper Canada, for Toronto. It was that of the political prisoners sentenced for participation in the raid on Windsor and destined for transportation to Van Diemen's Land. The journey lasted nearly a week, under the most trying conditions. The prisoners were crowded into the hold of the ship, and were subjected to the most brutal treatment. Many of them died of disease and starvation.

"Very early this morning we were awakened and told to get ready to take our departure. We were to be sent to the United States, and were to be sent to the United States, and were to be sent to the United States."

"Come upstairs and let me wash your hands," said the mother who arrived with her little daughter for tea at grandmother's.

"Let her wash them in the kitchen," said the mother, firmly. "I want her to come up with me. I want her to come up with me. I want her to come up with me."

"Why don't you obey your mother?"

EDGAR WELCH

WELLS, MINE, PLANE

LOWERED RATTLESNAKE MOUNTAIN

IN ORDER TO LENGTHEN

THE HOURS OF DAYLIGHT

ON HIS FARM

SO FORTH WOULD WORK NIGHT BE DONE!

THEY WERE BROUGHT TO SCOTLAND BY A TAILOR

EXPLANATION OF TODAY'S CARTOON

A MAN MOVED A MOUNTAIN. More than a million cubic feet of broken rock lies on the side of Rattlesnake Mountain, Weber Hills, Maine—a monument to Edgar Welch's effort to lengthen the day on his farm. He believed that the towering summit cut short the sunlight hours, so he quarried off a million cubic feet of the top. YOUNGEST JOCKEY, Carter Curtis, Jr., only two years and 10 months old, is the world's youngest licensed jockey. He was granted an apprentice jockey's license by Edward Fry, commissioner of racing for Michigan. Known as "Buck," at the Detroit race track, he is the son of Carter Curtis, track superintendent and a favorite of the horsemen!
